

Department of Political Science and International Relations

One of the three departments of the Faculty of Economic and Administrative Sciences, the Department of Political Science and International Relations was founded in 1999.

With a view of educating specialists in the field of international relations and political science, our department aims to convey to its students the main and contemporary knowledge and concepts on political processes and structures, political theory, policies, the functioning, legal framework, history and historical stages of the international system and to endow them with the ability to analyse events and phenomena with scientific method and to think critically and analytically.

Emphasis is placed upon Turkey's position in the international system and its foreign relations, and the main dynamics of political life in Turkey are taken up with a universal and comparative approach.

Our curriculum includes a wide spectrum of lectures. The aim of the program is, with English correspondence and diplomatic correspondence lessons in addition to core courses, educate individuals who can commit their ideas into writing and communicate them effectively and are successful in human relations, possess qualities of representation and a sense of general culture and speak at least one foreign language well.

Our department has 2 divisions and its academic staff includes 6 professors, 2 associate professors, 9 assistant professors, 1 teaching staff and 10 research assistants. 30 % of courses are taught in English.
