School of Vocational Studies

In the rapidly changing world of today, the necessity to meet the renewed requirements of society in technical and social fields for new professions brings an added importance to vocational schools.

The Yıldız Technical University School of Vocational Studies was founded on the basis of this understanding in 1984 with the aim of training the well-qualified, high-performance mid-level workforce adaptable to scientific and technological development and capable of realizing the high-quality production demanded by the business and services industries.

Our department accepts students from Anadolu Vocational High Schools, Anadolu Technical High Schools and Vocational High Schools without examination.

Our academic staff includes 1 associate professor, 5 assistant professors, 35 teaching staff and 2 specialists.
